"But you do not yet know everything. Living in a right dwelling one soon learns that it matters little whether he is served with a golden spoon or a brass one. The essential thing is to brias one. The essential thing is to live in peace with a good conscience." At these words I could no longer find the keyhole, and Catharine began to laugh at my lack of skill. At length, however, I opened the casket, and my cyes were dazzled by its contents. Under a blue velvet cushion glittered a set of diamonds.

Catharine stepped to the door and called her master; but no sooner had he glanced at the casket, than he rudely seized my hand, saying, "The brood with the large diamond in the centre is Ex-Consul Belford and His Escapade From the Fiji Islands.

THE FITCHES OF GEORGIA.

Two Notable Characters in the Post-Bellium History of that State.

JUDGE CHENOWETH OF TEXAS.

No Religious Tests to Be Applied In the Diplomatic Service.

This is the story about ex-Consul-Belford as told by the correspondents of the Western papers: About a year ago President Arthur appointed S. E. Belford commercial agent of the United States at Levuka, Fiji Islands. Belford is a brother of ex-Congressman "Jim" Belford, and the latter gentleman had great difficulty in getting his unruly brother to start for Fiji. Finally, after repeated attempts, the new consul was shipped on board a steamer, and "Jim" congratulated himself upon the loss of a brother who had been a mill-stone around his neck. Consul Belford had been at his post but a few months when reports began to arrive of queer finan-cial operations. These reports were so scandalous that the State Deby scanding that the state partment some time ago rem Mr. Belford and appointed deputy to the place. A vate letter was received from vate letter was received from Fiji by a gentleman in this city to-day, which gives some very interesting de-tails of Belford's operations in the island. The writer says that "Belford absconded per schooner Sancy Lass to Semon" on the 14th of August, leav-ing many mourning creditors. The Union Bank of Australia is a heavy creditor, having cashed drafts drawn creditor, having cashed drafts drawn by Belford on the Department of State as well as upon his relations. It seems also that he attempted to oust the acalso that he attempted to oust the ac-credited deputy commercial agent and to appoint in his stead a man named Brewer. Since Belford's departure from Fiji a draft for $500 upon his father, indorsed by Brewer, has been protested, and that gentleman finds himself compelled to pay it. Belford left debts innumerable, which amount to the strategy of dollars in the aggreto thousands of dollars in the aggregate. Besides he is reported to have sold goods consigned to him and to have spent the money. One instance of this kind affects a Baltimore firm, who shipped fishing nets to him, which were sold for £60. The money is gone and the boatmen concern is so much out. The effect of Belford's course promises to be very disastrous to the future of United States consuls at Pa-

In connection with the prospective reopening of the Don Cameron mansion on Scott Circle, a good story is told about that locality. When Senator Windom, who now owns a fine residence on Scott Circle, first came to this city, he lived on Capitol Hill. When he was about to build, he did not know exactly which locality to take; but finally he decided on the West End. One day Mrs. Windom called on some friends on Capitol Hill, and during the conversation they said: "So Mrs. Windom called to the conversation they said: "So Mrs. Windom Capitol Hill, and during the conversation they said: "So Mrs. Windom Libert vo. strengther." dom, I hear you are going to move down in the horse pasture." "My hus-band is going to build in the West End," answered the lady. But the re-mark worried her, and finally she asked mark worried her, and many sne asked a friend, "Is Scott Circle really a horse pasturer" "Well, no," replied the friend, "but some of the Capital Hill people call it such because you can stand at the Circle and almost everywhere you look you can see an eques trian statue.'

will no longer cash drafts, and in con-sequence months must pass before they

Judge Chenoweth of Texas, the First Auditor of the Treasury, as described by the correspondent of the Cleveland Plain-Dealer, is rather above medium size, very tidy in his dress and fond of wearing a low-cut vest to display his unimpeachable linen and heavy gold studs. His face is full and round, somewhat resembling Bob Ingersoll's, except that he has a fine mustache on his upper lip. The judge is a hard worker. During the hottest days of July he was found constantly at his desk, with coat and vest both off, godesk, with cost and vest both off, go-ing through the accounts that came to his hands. He is a warm friend and generous hater. He believes in hav-ing Democrats fill the offices, because he believes that their theory in running the Government is the proper one. He insists in economy in the public service and does not believe in having the Government do things that belong to private enterprise. He is a great stu-dent, and when he becomes absorbed in a subject he is sometimes oblivious to minor matters that are going on about him. He is thus sometimes called absent-minded, but he is admitted to be the right man in the right place and is doing a great deal of excel-lent work in the routing of rings that have fattened on the public pap.

There were two Fitches in Georgia who will long be remembered as the oddest characters of the reconstruction period in that State, F. S. Fitch, the editor of the Griffin Star, and Henry S. Fitch, a Savannah lawyer. Editor Fitch was originally from Vermont but had long been identified with the South, and he was noted for the violence of his assaults upon radical rule. He would sometimes come up to Atlanta to speak at a Democratic meeting. Most of the Democratic speakers, says the Atlanta-Constitution, were guarded in their utterances in those days. A Democratic meeting in sixty-seven and sixty-eight was a very solemn affair. Some good citizens were afraid to attend. The presence of soldiers and General Pope's judge-advocate was not calculated to inspire elequence. But these depressing sur-roundings had no effect upon Pitch, except to make him boil over with in-dignation. He would stand up and shake his fist at the military, and abuse them for an hour, to the intense delight of his unreconstructed audience. One night he defied General Pope and his minions to suppress him. In a frenzy of eloquent rage he faced the Federal spies and soldiers who were at the meeting, as usual, and yelled: "You may shed my blood, but yencer: You may shed my so. Such was the temper of the times that this was considered a rhetorical gem of the first water. Men cheered until they were hearse, and this queer boast because of the general control of the general con consumption. The other Fitch, Henry S., was a son of United States Senator Fitch of Indiana. He was an officer under Sherman, and after the march to the sea, opened a law office in Savannah. He was a brilliant, brainy man, speaking like Choate and writing like Junius. The Democracy gladly welcomed this able recruit, and for awhile he wazed a merciless warfare upon radicals and carpet-baggers. When he made a speech it fairly glittered with epigrams and points. Describing Bradley, a freekled faced mainto Republican leader, who beasted that he was born in South Carolina and cducated in Boston, Fitch said; "And now we come to that speckled whelp, littered in South Carolina and kenneled in New England; the bastard of the cavalior, the disgraced apprendict controlled in New England, the bastard of the cavalier, the disgraced apprentice of the puritan!" Under Andrew Johnson, Fitch was appointed United States district attorney. He made a fairly good official, but his drinking habits and his interest in politics naturally interfered with his usefulness.

The largest is accounted by The lawyers in Savannah and Atlanta stuck to Fitch to the last. They knew him to be a big-heartest, elequent, scholarly man, and his faults they set down as his misfortunes. But there was no saving him.

Says the correspondent of the New York Star: Such objections as are advanced in the Carry case would, if generally applied, create havoc throughout the whole list of diplomatic appointments. Mr. Phelps, who is in England, does not belong to the established church; General McLane, who is in France, is not a Catholic; Mr. Lathrop, who is in Russia, is not of the Greek faith; Coionel Derby, who has gone to China, is unquestionably a Christian man, while Mr. Cox, in Turkey, not only does not assent to the re-ligion of that country, but belongs to a political party which, in its National declaration of principles, denounces polygamy and every custom akin to it in the roundest terms possible, and is committed to an extermination of the evil under the law. The only test that will be applied to Mr. Curry he is abundantly able to stand, both at the court to which he is accredited and beforethe Senate of the United States. which is to pass upon his appointment He is honest, he is capable, he is faithful to the Constitution

SOUTH WASHINGTON.

The old wooden pump at the corner of Four-and-half and D streets southwest has been out of working order the past three weeks, causing numerous complaints to be made to the police by the residents in the vicinity. The record-book at the station shows that the complaints have been forwarded to the Engineer's office and the lack of attention is there. The water from this pump is reputed for its good qualities, and the residents are not only deprived of the refreshing beverage, but are placed at great inconvenience, as the next nearest pump is some three squares off.

Major Burbank of the Washington Barracks reported at police headquarters several days ago that a gold watch and chain had been stolen from his room at the barracks. Yesterday the police found the watch in a pawn-shop on Pennsylvania avenue, where it was pawned by William Kennedy, an employe of the Theatre Comique, for $5. Kennedy upon being questioned by the officers stated that the watch was given him by two soldiers named Esmon and Marulie to nawn for them. The soldiers were James II, Owens, proprietor of the Poto-mac House foot of Sixth street southwest, was arrested by Officer Dan Williams yester-day for violating the Sunday liquor law. He gave $20 collateral for his appearance at Police Court.

Police Court.

A prepossessing young woman, accompanied by a well-dressed man, was arrested on B street southwest, by Officers Shehan and Kearney last night for being drunk and acting in a disorderly manner. At the station the woman gave her name as Lesile Wilhard, occupation, dress maker, and the man, Adolphus R. Forrest, a tailor. They were released on furnishing $5 collateral each.

In the Garden of Eden.

It is said that our first parents were not troubled with dyspensia, and that they knew nothing of debility, liver complaint, knew nothing of debility, liver complaint, or malarious diseases. But the children of Adam, from Cain down to the present time, have inherited bad blood and a host of other disorders, mest of which can be driven out by the timely use of Brown's from Bitters. Mr. J. D. Rodefer of Greendale, Va., "was cured of a bad case of eczema by this valuable medicine, and recommends it to every one in his neighborhood for any disorder of the blood, and as a general tonic."

EAST WASHINGTON.

There were a large number of marines at the navy-yard suffering from cholera mor-bus yesterday and Monday and an investi-gation was had, and it was found that the cause of their sickness was tainted food that they bought from a "bumboat" woman called by them "Little Buttercup," who sells them knicknacs in the yard.

pear B portheast, which will cost $4,000. One arrest, for disorderly conduct, is East Washington yesterday, and one mak-lodger was accommodated last night.

The Duffy Malt Whiskies.

One of the most enterprising and success ful business concerns of Baltimore, whose goods are known by the excellence of their reputation all over the United States, is the Duffy Malt Whisky Company, which has just taken possession of new and com-modious quarters, suited to the rapidly growing extent of its operations, and which proposes during the coming year to spend not less than $200,000 in cultivating the still better acquaintance of the general public. The company is pushing the introduction of its goods in all directions and with great energy. THE SAVINGS BANK.

BY BERTHOLD AUERBACK.

You know that I lost my father and mother in my infancy, and that I had not a relative in the world. I was wild and thoughtless when I began my apprenticeship as locksmith. My maser was, on the other hand, a grave, reserved man, so that a very few words from him were important. When for from him were important. When for the first time he paid me a week's wages, he said: "Peter, you do not need more than half of what is due you; the other half I will set saide for the savings bank." And so it was. On Palm Sunday, before mass, he went with me to the savings bank. My name was written in a huge register, and they gave me a book, on the first name was written in a huge register, and they gave me a book, on the first page of which was inscribed my name, and on the second deposit, seven crowns. I held my little book lovingly, and looked often at my name and the amount of my capital. I was so en chanted with this operation that I became avaricious. I reformed my habit of smoking, and gave myself no rest till I had another small sum to deposit. When I passed the bank building I When I passed the bank building I would say to myself, "There is my good money bringing interest night and day, Very good. I will add to the amount."

Would that I had continued to talk alone to myself! But I soon confided to a companion from the Palatimate, and whom for that reason we called the Palatin. To amuse myself on Sun-der I would take the back of the day I would take my book from its box, and would try to compute pre-cisely how much a month my twelve crowns would bring me. The Pat-atin, who was a skillful accountant, told me exactly, and then he began to make sport of the trifling amount and tossed my book into the air, exclaiming, 'Look at the fortune of the great capitalist, Peter Werner !"

The little book fell on my head, and seemed to have suffered insult. I wiped it, put it back into the box and did not show it to my companion again. Just before Christmas there was a great fire in the city. The house that contained the savings bank was con-sumed before aid could be brought. I was greatly excited when I learned was greatly excited when I learned that the registers of deposit were burned. All my fortune was inscribed in them. The Palatin, however, laughed heartily. "You fool!" he said, "what are you crying for? The city has guaranteed the deposits made in the savings bank. You have your receipt. The State must pay you."

The State must pay you.

This reflection reassured me. I showed my book to my companion again, and he told me that it was perfeetly correct.

fectly correct.

That night when we lay down side by side to sleep, he said, "Peter, you and I can be rich, and will have nothing to do but see the world and let our money work for us." He added that we must go to California, where the earth is full of gold.

"Very good," I answered, "but who will give us money to make the will give us money to make the voy-

"Haven't you your bank book?"
"You call it a trifle yourself."
"We will make something better of it," said he, striking a light. "I have an idea. Get up, and show me your book."
"Cantall" he oright with the monotonous tickings of the clock. My heart knocked hard against my side.

"Capital!" he cried, when I had given him my book. "Nobody will have the slightest suspicion. 'Received have the means of starting on our travels."

At these words I began to tremble, "My friend," said I, "this ought not to be done. I will not permit it."

"Let me alone," replied he; "I will show you how easy it is,"

A fatal curiosity woke in me, and I said to him: "You can do it this way.

Try it on another paper, or else you

Try it on another paper, or else you would spoil my book, and I should lose the little I possess."

I hoped he would not succeed and that his failure would deliver me from and yet I my guilty covetousness; and yet I could have wished him to succeed.

"Let me alone," he sharply replied, "and do not make me angry; or else my hand will tremble and I shall spoil everything."

I crossed my arms on my chest, and with trembling I watched him change the words written in my precious book, while it seemed as if my heart were bursting. Then he took a little knife and scratched out a few letters. I shivered, and yet I said to myself: "Now you are rich and able to grow richer." richer I looked at what he had just written:

"Received five hundred crowns," No-body could detect the least falsification in these words, and the great register was burned.

We returned to bed. I already saw myself across the ocean, picking up nuggets of gold. I had a carriage with four magnificent horses, and a servant who offered me a beautiful meerschaum pipe trimmed with silver, while another poured my champagne. The next morning at the table I feared every moment that I might see an officer approaching to take me to prison. I was so much afraid of uttering an imprudent word that I dared not reply immediately to any question. I no longer dared to carry money to the savings bank, but made long detours to avoid passing the building in which it had been recognized. Gradually, however, I recovered a sort of tranquility, as I saw that nobody suspected what i had done. But when on the approach of Christmas, my master's children began to dance around me one morning saying, "We know something that we shan't tell!" their voices piercod my heart like a knife. They knew the surprises their father was preparing for our pleasure and were delighted with

On Christmas eve Counsellor Menninger's servant came running to our workshop. I was in the doorway. She said she had come for me, and that I must go at once with my tools to her master's house.

The counsellor's name had terrified me. Could my fault be already known? I had decided not to use my book till spring, and had never shown it. But I was afraid of everything.

Nevertheless, I went with the young girl. She had a sweet, fresh face, and the pure Christmas light burned to her "My father wants a locksmith," said she. "St. Peter is our patron, and for many people the key to Paradise is the

We arrived at the counsellor's house and I was shown into a richly for alshed room. The counsellor brought me an elegant case whose key was broken, and bade me open it. He then told Catherine, my guide, that he had other preparations to make, and bade her remain with the locksmith.
